Reh. Text

- B Every night the spiders weave the world back together.
Their webs shine freshly gossamer in the new morning's sun.
- D Everywhere the spiders stitch leaf to tree
tree to shrub
shrub to ground
Each new-made web shines gossamer in the new sun.
- E The spiders weave webs that stitch the precious land to the blue blue sky
Above the stream each new-made web shines freshly gossamer in the new sun.
- F Somewhere
Someone is planning to kill
Someone has been killed
Someone grieves
Someone hides in fear
- G Here by the black creek
I am not afraid of death.
Here I am far from sounds of war, sounds of terror.
I do not worry about a death I have not imagined.
- J In the spider's world, in this sacred swamp,
the kingfisher careens, raucous, up the creek.
A doe wades out to drink.
The tiny cricket frogs leap from lily pad to spatterdock.
I see more sandhill cranes than people and I know that black bears roam the woods unseen.

But I am not afraid.
The death I cannot imagine is far from here.
- M Somewhere
Someone is planning to kill
Someone has been killed
Someone grieves
- N In this, the spiders' world, the fall grasses are flowering in the trembling savannas__asters, yellow-eyed grass, meadow beauty.
The sun shines golden on the water.
Then flowers fade, fall turns to winter and winter brings a different beauty.
- P Somewhere
Someone hides in fear
Someone has been killed
Someone grieves

All life is transitory.
- Q I have learned that I am not afraid of death
but I do fear an unforeseen death.
Do not let my death be fired by hate.
Let me prepare for death, and at the proper time, let me die naturally.
- R Every night the spiders weave the world back together.
Each web that we destroy they patiently repair.
Everywhere the spiders stitch
leaf to tree
tree to shrub
shrub to ground
- T The spiders weave webs that stitch the precious land to the blue blue sky.
Each new-made web shines gossamer in the new morning sun.
- U The spiders spin and spin and hold this outrageously glorious world together.
